

I find it ludicrous that any government agency or employee would consider that the so-called "rights" of the telemarketers supercedes the rights of the taxpaying residents of New Jersey, or any other state. Protecting citizens' rights to peace in their own homes should be the overriding priority. Businesses that exist on solicitations alone perhaps should rethink their business plan to improve ways to attract customers and not repel them with bothersome, unwanted telephone calls day and night. Please do NOT repeal the "Do Not Call" policy in New Jersey or nationally.

Respectfully submitted,

Claudia Gathman